C4i Recognised in Top 20 Australian Defence Industry SME

C4i, a world leader in mission-critical, intelligent, Command and Control, Communication solutions for the Defence, Public safety and Homeland Security markets was recognized in the Australian Defence Magazine (ADM) top twenty (20) Defence Small Medium Enterprises (SME).

C4i was ranked 16th in terms of revenues within the Australian defence SMEs for the 2007/2008 Financial Year. During that year C4i performed work on Air Defence communications systems in the United States, Australia, Greece, Croatia, Thailand and Jordan and performed other defence work for the US Army, Australian Special Forces, Australian Navy and Singapore Navy.

C4i also commenced the full commercialisation of its Generation III product during that year, which has continued to open a range of new markets within the defence arena. C4i's IP based Generation III product provides a range of highly capable, highly available, ruggedized, small footprint communications solutions that are suitable for a range of mobile platforms. These same products form the core building blocks for C4i's larger system offerings including the fixed and transportable Command-Post and the largest national command and control systems known as Command-Centres. In addition to its comprehensive range of products, C4i offers a range of complementary support and engineering services into these same target markets.

C4i expects its strong performance in FY2007 in the defence business to continue in 2008 where more Generation III applications are realised.
